The Entrepreneurial Adventure of a Lifetime

Are you a student who is ready for a life-altering experience in a unique setting?

Entrepreneurship and Empowerment in South Africa (EESA) offers such an opportunity for select students over a 6-week period.

South Africa is both a “first-world” economy with a well-developed infrastructure and technologically advanced business environment and a “third-world” economy with a sizeable informal sector, undereducated and unskilled workers, and high poverty levels. Today, the country faces the unique economic development challenge of attempting to correct past wrongs while at the same time becoming globally competitive. It is in this context that entrepreneurship is absolutely crucial.

Students enrolled in this award-winning and high-impact program travel to beautiful Cape Town, South Africa, working with emerging entrepreneurs in the surrounding townships. These entrepreneurs have managed to overcome a history of apartheid, limited education, and severely constrained resources to create small enterprises. Their ventures range from catering and arts and crafts businesses to community newspapers and small manufacturing operations. Some of the ventures are unregistered, more are under-financed, and each has distinct needs and opportunities. The common trait among these business owners is a dream that their ventures will achieve sustainability and growth.

Student consulting teams are expected to identify and prioritize the needs of the ventures and make meaningful progress in addressing those needs with tangible deliverables that can be implemented by the entrepreneur. The entrepreneur gains much from the team, but experience shows that the students gain even more from the entrepreneur.

Courses

Students enroll in up to two 2 credit hour courses (graduate or undergraduate). Auditing is not an option for these courses. The EESA program is delivered at the University of the Western Cape campus in South Africa. The courses are: Supporting Emerging Enterprises (Graduate/Undergraduate) This hands-on course introduces students to the South African context, township entrepreneurship, the basics of the consulting process, and practical approaches to addressing managerial issues in emerging enterprises. Students are introduced to the SEE consulting model—a systematic approach to helping these types of ventures. Special modules deal with cultural understanding, funding, marketing, operations, accounting, human resources development, the political context, and other economic development issues. These modules are specially tailored to reflect the township context, and students are exposed to a number of case studies written about entrepreneurs who have participated in the program in past years.

"Be the change you wish to see in the world."

-M. Gandhi

Entrepreneurship Field Experience (Graduate/Undergraduate)

This course provides interaction with township entrepreneurs over 6 weeks as part of structured consulting engagements. Students identify key needs and problems and create practical solutions. They experience the cultural context in which the entrepreneurs live and the distinct challenges they confront. The consulting engagements start at the same time as the class meetings. The teams are expected to solve problems and implement solutions hand-in-hand with the entrepreneurs.

Faculty

Michael Morris is a Professor of Entrepreneurship and Social Innovation in the Keough School of Global Affairs at the University of Notre Dame. He started the Supporting Emerging Enterprises Program, on which EESA is based, in South Africa in 1997. A widely published author, Dr. Morris has been recognized as one of the top twenty entrepreneurship professors in America.

Erick Mueller is the Entrepreneurship Scholar in Residence at the Leeds Business School at the University of Colorado in Boulder. He has been recognized for his outstanding teaching. Professor Mueller has successfully launched a number of entrepreneurial ventures and works closely with start-up companies, providing management advice and capital.

Jamie Kraft is the Director of the Entrepreneurship & Innovation Center at the University of Florida and manages the Entrepreneurship Case Lecture Series as well as the Global Entrepreneurship Study Program. He spent several years at Deloitte Consulting as a management consultant, focusing primarily on economic performance evaluation, competitive assessment, and strategic development for clients in the manufacturing and consumer products industries. He holds a degree in Microbiology and a Master's degree in Business, specializing in Finance, Operations Management, and Strategy.

Who is Eligible?

The program is open to graduate and upper-level undergraduate students with a grade point average of 3.0 or higher. A background in business administration is not required, as several of the projects have components appropriate for students with backgrounds in social work, hospitality management, economics, sustainable development, international relations, African studies, and other fields. The key requirements are personal maturity and responsibility, creativity, a high energy level and enjoyment of hard work, a willingness to learn, and a desire to make a difference. Students are placed in teams that balance their backgrounds and skills with those of other students. No other courses can be taken concurrently with the two EESA courses.
